

OBJECT OF THE MONTH

HIRO GYM, VIENNA

Thick air and increased humidity: Hardly any other room requires a sophisticated ventilation system as much as the sports and fitness studio.

If you do sports, good air quality is essential. The more people perform, the more oxygen their body needs to adequately supply their organs, brain and muscles. During physical exertion, the breathing rate increases fourfold. But good performance can only be achieved by those who breathe in clean air. Comfort ventilation therefore helps people who do sports feel more physically and mentally alive.

Adequate fire protection is equally important. That's why energy-efficient fire dampers from PICHLER were taken into account during the planning, which reliably ensure safety in the event of a fire.
